PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

Information on how to get around Brussels

<https://visit.brussels/site/en/article/transport-in-brussels>

GETTING TO BRUSSELS CITY CENTRE FROM BRUSSELS ZAVENTEM AIRPORT

Compared to most airports around the world, Brussels Airport is close to the city centre (12 km) but rush hour traffic can make it a long journey.

By Train

There is a train going from Brussels Zaventem Airport to Brussels every 10 minutes between 5am and midnight, 7 days a week. The ride takes around 20 minutes and costs € 9,00.

Brussels has three main train stations, Gare du Midi, Gare Centrale and Gare du Nord and to reach the venue, you should disembark at Gare Centrale.

By Taxi

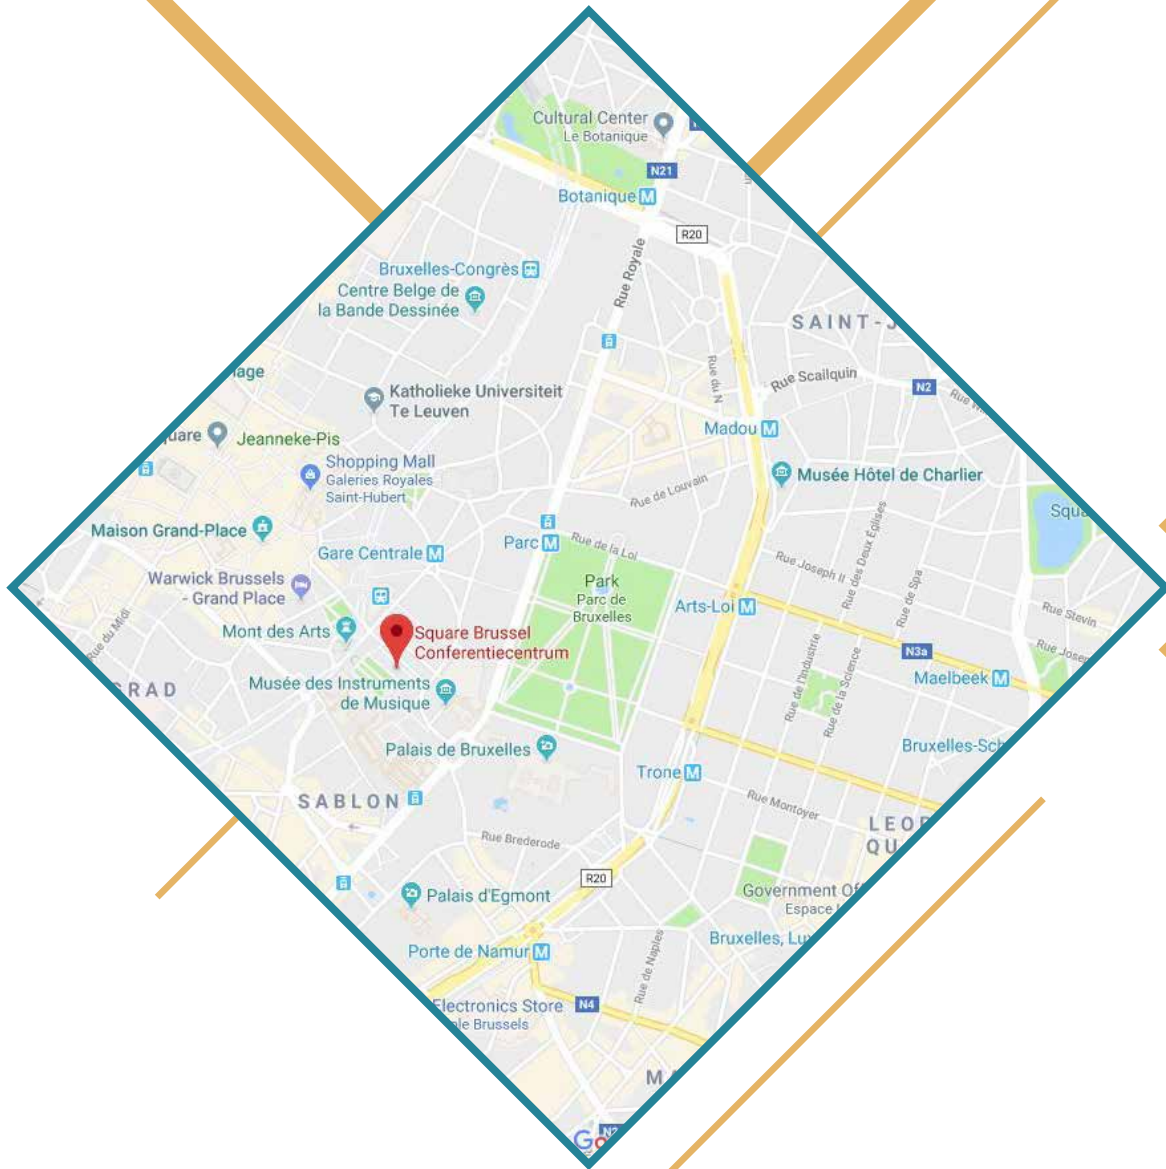

Taxis are available just outside the arrivals terminal. The cost of the taxi fare will depend on the traffic and destination but should be in the range of 40-60 EUR.

Airport Bus

The Airport Line is a public Brussels Airport bus that takes you to the European district of Schuman or Luxembourg. To continue to the city centre take metro lines 1 or 5 from Schuman metro station to Gare Central metro station direction to Gare de l'Ouest or Erasme.

Line 12 (operates Monday to Friday until 8pm) and only travels to main stations - the only metro stop is Schuman (EU Headquarters) and the last stop is Luxembourg station.

BRUSSELS IN A NUTSHELL

Brussels is a region between Flanders and Wallonie, the two main communities in Belgium. It comprises 19 municipalities, including the City of Brussels, the capital of Belgium, that form the Brussels-Capital Region. Its area is 161 km² and the population is 1.2 million. The metropolitan area has population of over 2.1 million people, the largest in Belgium.

Brussels has a regional government and 19 communes responsible for the activities of each area of the city, each having its own mayor and a cabinet.

Belgium has three official languages (Flemish, French and German), though Brussels is primarily francophone.

Brussels is in the heart of Europe and is home of the institutions of the European Union and other international organisations, such as NATO.

Brussels is also famous for its chocolates, beers, waffles, Brussels sprouts, smurfs and many others.
